Hong Kong

March 1987

Bob Trubshaw

In March 1987 I had the opportunity to fly out to Hong Kong and spend two nights in a five-star hotel. My companion was on a work trip. She had visited Hong Kong many times and was able to pack in as many of the interesting places as possible in the available time.

Hong Kong was still a British colony until 1999.

Flights were into and out of the legendary Kai Tak Airport.

These photographs were taken on ISO 100 Fujichrome using an Olympus OM1 camera. They were scanned using a lightbox and a Nikon D300 DSLR.

This photo book was prepared in January 2026.

Apologies, I did not keep a record of the locations.

Content warning: one photograph shows the butchering of frogs.
